^b The Commission is authorized to waive certain provisions of the Ethics Law, subject to statutory standards and, in some cases, imposition of special conditions.
^c Advisory opinions represent interpretations of the Ethics Law and can serve as guidelines for the future (the Ethics Commission is the final authority for interpreting the Ethics Law). Advisory opinions are posted on the web and incorporated into ethics training.
^d Routine requests include all customer contacts except those regarding financial disclosure. Note that if a request for outside employment is already approved by the department director, the employee may begin work while the request is being processed by the Commission.
^e Routine transactions include outside employment approval requests, lobbyist registration forms and activity reports, financial disclosure forms processed, and customer service contacts.
^f Authority was granted to the Executive Secretary in June 2005 to issue citations requiring a court appearance and possible fines for those persons who, after receiving numerous requests to file, refuse to file financial disclosure statements as required by law.
EXPLANATION:
The Ethics Commission is the final authority for interpretation of the County's Ethics Law, enforcing compliance, and ensuring ethical conduct by employees of the Executive Branch, County Council, Boards and Commissions, Revenue Authority, Housing Opportunities Commission, fire corporations, and rescue squads. Designated public officials, employees, appointees, candidates for public office, and volunteers are required to disclose financial information that could reveal existing or potential conflicts of interest. Lobbyists are required to register and periodically report on lobbying activities involving the County government. The Ethics Commission receives and acts on complaints of violations of the Ethics Law, makes final decisions on requests for approval of outside employment, renders and publishes advisory opinions, and is the official repository for forms and records filed under the County's Public Ethics Law. The Commission is authorized to conduct investigations, issue summonses and subpoenas, impose sanctions, adopt regulations, establish procedures, and conduct related public information and education programs. Under certain circumstances, the Commission can waive certain provisions of the Ethics Law. Complaints can be dismissed by the Commission or, if valid, adjudicated through a hearing or by consent order. Possible sanctions include fines, public or private reprimands, termination of employment, and criminal prosecution. Persons affected by a final decision of the Commission regarding a complaint, request for waiver, or request for approval of outside employment may appeal to the Circuit Court. (No Commission decisions have ever been appealed to the Circuit Court.)
